Ricardo Chávez also is out for at least a month after tearing the anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee. The Revs announced the news Tuesday, saying Chávez has been rehabilitating in Florida since he suffered the injury last weekend against FC Dallas. Chávez's wife, Mary, said in a statement that the couple's daughter will stay with her mother in Connecticut while her husband recovers. "We are still in shock," Chávez said in a statement. "I feel so bad for my wife and my daughter, as it's tough to see them go through this. I'd also like to apologize to my teammates, and the entire New England Revolution, for all the great times we've had. I really can't wait to get back on the field and help my team. I have great teammates and they really will help me along the way. I'm blessed to have a team that loves me as much as they do. And I'm always looking to do my part for the team and the city." Chávez was hurt in the first minute of New England's 1-1 draw with FC Dallas. Dallas midfielder Daniel Hernandez kicked the ball into the penalty area, and Revolution defender Daigo Kobayashi turned, fell and tried to catch the ball with his right foot. He caught it on the outside of his leg and fell to the ground, and Chávez immediately came sliding in to catch him and fall on top of him. Chávez landed hard on his left knee and immediately screamed in pain. After the game, he hopped awkwardly in his cleats and looked at his leg. "When the ball hits, the movement is enough to break your knee," he said at the time. The club sent Chávez to Houston Methodist Hospital for an MRI. The MRI showed the injury. He underwent surgery in Houston and a second round of surgery in Boston. Coach Jay He
