My code looks like: (function () { 'use strict'; angular .module('app') .controller('authCtrl', authCtrl); authCtrl.$inject = ['$scope', '$http']; function authCtrl($scope, $http) { $scope.loadAll = loadAll; loadAll(); function loadAll() { $http({ method: 'GET', url: 'api/user/all' }).success(function (data) { $scope.users = data; }); } } }()); But I have an error: Cannot read property 'success' of undefined. Should I use some loader? A: You should declare your $http object inside the function loadAll function and use the $scope.users variable in the success method. Not outside. loadAll(); function loadAll() { $http({ method: 'GET', url: 'api/user/all' }).success(function (data) { $scope.users = data;
