I have two buttons inside one ttk button widget. How can I assign some commands to each button separately? I tried to use `ttk:tkcommand(command(button, select all), button)` but this code returns error that nothing declared inside `def command`. `import tkinter from tkinter import ttk def selectAll(): ''' All other functions, which modify tkinter object, do this. :return: ''' tkinter.update_idletasks() L.SelectAll() def button(): ''' Button1's event handler :return: ''' print ('hi') root = tkinter.Tk() root.title('button') L = ttk.Label(root, text='Label', font=12, justify='LE`

The presence of atypia and HPV can be seen in both genital and extragenital intraepithelial neoplastic lesions.⁹ We selected a representative lesion from each patient with confirmed atypia by the consensus of two expert clinical cytopathologists (J. But in the case of HPV infections in other oropharyngeal sites, staining can be performed from the same cervical sample. The lesion is given the designation concordant, discordant, or indeterminate. The grade of the lesion is established by the amount of nuclear atypia present in the epithelial cells. However, there are several cases in which atypia is seen within a primary squamous cell carcinoma.¹⁰ In such cases, a detailed immunohistochemical panel is performed that demonstrates the presence of the HPV type involved in the lesion. In some cases, however, the HPV results are discordant with the histologic diagnosis of the lesion. This is more likely to occur in cases of carcinoma-in-situ, which are known to be present in a high percentage of HPV-positive women. HPV-positive women with atypia in the squamous 82138339de
