For almost everyone their profession is their ticket to a decent life and they are determined to work hard. The better they do in their job the more money they should earn, so the competition for promotion is fierce. But while working hard it's also vital that you need to know your rights. Here are three tips to help you manage your career while at work. 1. Know your rights – there are many different rights for different situations at work Rights in the workplace are made up of the following: The right to an equal pay for equal work; The right to fair treatment at work; The right to be protected from discrimination; The right to a safe working environment; The right to take part in flexible working; The right to holiday and paid leave. These rights are important and your employer should respect them. But you may sometimes find yourself in situations where there is disagreement about your rights. Here are some examples that you may experience: You are doing overtime and do not get paid for it; Your employer discharges you without a chance to contest the decision; You are discriminated against because of your pregnancy and nothing is done to protect you; You are employed in a job with a low pay and no overtime and your employer is keen to speed up the work to get it finished before the deadline; You feel your colleagues don't treat you fairly. If you are dissatisfied about a particular situation then you should talk to your manager about it. If there is no improvement, your employer may then have to offer you a resolution. If this doesn't work you can always take it to your line manager, your employer's Personnel Manager or the Equal Employment and Human Rights Commission. 2. When you are dismissed or made redundant you are entitled to certain benefits and rights If your employer dismisses you they are obliged to pay

Forgive us, American right-wingers: we've been a little naughty. For example, we've been trying to highlight the peculiarly American vibe of some of the arguments that immigration restrictionists make. The basic point is that restrictions on immigration are easy to understand, especially on the classic grounds that it's hard to know who to admit as immigrants and easy to distinguish real victims from liars. On the right, though, we've been able to identify a feeling that immigration restrictions are necessary to keep America American: 09e8f5149f

The program can be configured to record up to 100 keyboard actions in every minute. It creates a log file at every start or on every event (keystroke or mouse click). The log files can be kept for the specified period of time (see “Settings”) and “cleared” by the user to erase the earlier records or set of actions. The database can be compressed to save the disk space if the application is run frequently. To view the log files, one can use the embedded Log Viewer. The reports can be sent automatically to an e-mail address or uploaded to an FTP server, where they can be viewed later. Hooker Lite Requirements: - CPU: 1 GHz or faster - Version: 1.50 - Mem: 256 Mb or more - Hard Drive: 500 Mb free Win+Mac: Size: 350 Mb Language: English Installer: Click here Hooker Lite is a compact application that can record the activity of the keyboard and save it to a log file. It can be used for keeping tabs on the activity of a computer while you are not at your desk. As the name implies, the application “hooks” itself to the current process and keeps track of every pressed key. Whether you are writing an e-mail or entering a password in your web browser, the app can capture the action and store it in a text log. View stored data and track it in real time You can watch the captured keyboard actions in real time as they are displayed in the main window. In order to view the log files you can use the embedded Log Viewer that enables you to select the time interval that you want to check. E-mail logs or send them to an FTP server If you want to view the activity from a remote computer, the program can be configured to send periodical reports about the activity to an e-mail address. You just need to enter the address and the SMTP parameters in the Options window. The reports can also be uploaded automatically to an FTP server if you want to check them later from a remote location. The user can save the report periodically or when the application closes. Clear-cut environment and a few hiccups The interface is simple and all the functions can be easily accessed from the main window. During its run time it has no impact on the computer performance to make the user aware of its presence.

The most interesting feature of Hooker Lite is that it can record all keystrokes and send you an e-mail report when the computer is idle. It works at stealth mode and is invisible to the user. When the application is used, it will capture the keyboard information like mouse movement and send the report to an e-mail address you’ve defined. Using the free trial version you can view and review the keys activity of the computer in real-time and perform the following actions: See what was pressed on the keyboard, in real-time. Review the activity log for the last few minutes or hours. See how many keystrokes were performed and which keys were pressed. Send a report about the activity to an e-mail address. Create an e-mail report and send it at any time. The free version of Hooker Lite will be replaced by the full version on 6 July 2014. The new version will not include any additional features and will bring the price from $0.99 to $39.99. Hooker Lite User Interface (UI) The user interface (UI) of Hooker Lite is simple. It consists of two main windows: the main window and the options window. The main window has two tabs: the keyboard activity tab and the logging tab. The keyboard activity tab is used to view the keys pressed on the computer keyboard. The logging tab is used to select the reporting time interval. Main Window The main window hosts the main window and a few small subwindows, which display some useful information about the application. 1. Left mouse button – You can use this button to close the application. 2. Keyboard keys pressed – You can view all the keystrokes that have been performed on the computer keyboard while the application was running. 3. System time – The system time is visible in the options window as well as in the main window. Options Window The options window hosts a few buttons that can be used to get access to the application main features. 1. Go to Log – You can move the keyboard activity tab (also visible in the main window) to the last position in the list. 2. Clear Log – You can clear the keyboard activity log and the e-mail log. You can select an interval to check the log. 3. Clear All Logs – You can clear both the keyboard activity log and the e
