Since Photoshop has other better-known versions too, and since Photoshop Elements is still updated, here is a comparison of the differences. Photoshop vs Photoshop Elements Let's begin. File types Photoshop has many formats but Photoshop Elements only supports PSD format. It is a standard Photoshop file extension. So what is it? The Photoshop PSD files are the native format of Adobe Photoshop. The PSD file can be opened in Photoshop and any other program that has an interpretation of the Photoshop PSD format. This format may not be an open standard but it is the most common file type used by digital artists. The Photoshop file format is a proprietary format so you need to buy the official software to open it. Adobe Photoshop CS6 and later has their own PSD formats, so you can create and edit images in CS6 and later only on Photoshop. Elements: Elements has only the Photoshop PSD format, but Adobe has their own version which can be opened in Photoshop Elements, and some other editors. The PSD extension may also be renamed to EPS. Image sizing Photoshop has many options for image sizes, and this is different in Photoshop Elements. Elements: Since Elements is an image editing software only, the sizes are limited only to the original size of the image. Even if you enlarge the image, Elements will keep it at the original size. Adobe Photoshop: There are many options for image sizes in Photoshop. You can use a big screen size, a small screen size, or change the size of the viewport. You can select a new zoom level or zoom out from the actual screen size. More options: Adobe Photoshop also provides a real-time zoom feature where you can scale the image. Compress Photoshop has four compression options, and they vary from lossless to lossy. These options save your file in any format depending on the option chosen. Elements: Elements has three compression options: lossy, lossless, and jpeg. The jpeg option is only for JPEG files. Image noise Photoshop: Photoshop has some built-in noise reduction tools. It can be found in the Advanced panel, in the Adjuster menu. With a few clicks you can reduce image noise. Elements: Photoshop Elements offers one noise reduction tool called the Best Clarity option which 388ed7b0c7

It's been three years since the Gujarat elections and Congress party is all set for the 2019 polls. The latest example is Rajasthan, which has turned into a Congress stronghold. Rajasthan Chief Minister Ashok Gehlot has a lot at stake. As much as a staggering 40 per cent of the state's seats are at stake. Gehlot has used the opportunity of coronavirus to campaign aggressively for his party. But in the last two weeks, he has been tested for COVID-19 and was found negative. The Congress party doesn't want people to be out on the streets. But in Rajasthan's Bikaner district, people were out on the streets to protest the lockdown. In Delhi, 60-year-old Ketki Joshi organised a one-day strike in protest against the government's decision to prohibit the movement of cars. "I am planning to bring a change in the way governance is being done in the country," she told NDTV. "We are the ones who do the work. While the governments are busy in studying science, we do agriculture. It's time to question everything they are doing." Congress workers protested in Bikaner, Rajasthan. They say they'll not pay the price for COVID-19 by missing their monthly wages. (Photo: Sohan Das) Singh, sitting on an election campaign poster, said that the Gujarat Chief Minister was in full touch with farmers in Gujarat, and that he was ready to write off the loans of the farmers. Vinod Singh promised to waive off loans of farmers. "Pradhan Mantri Fasal Bima Yojana will not only help farmers buy seeds but also provide money for sowing and buying fertilisers," he said. But, for people like Jitendra Rana of Bikaner, the news of a loan waiver, instead of an announcement that the state government will waive off the loan, is another worry. "The last time our farmers got a loan waiver, the government didn't tell us at all. It was just a news flash on television," he said. "We are paying a price to fight the coronavirus, but none of us here is getting the money in time. We have taken loans for the kharif crops. But we will not get the wages to pay for these loans," he said. Rana was
