1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a battery condition monitoring system for detecting and diagnosing a voltage, current, and temperature of a battery used for power supply. 2. Description of the Related Art If the battery internal resistance is large or the battery is short-circuited, the voltage of the battery drops and the battery may become unusable. Especially, when the temperature is high, the internal resistance of the battery increases. Therefore, if the battery is used for power supply at a high temperature, then the battery may suffer from destruction. To prevent this, a battery condition monitoring system in which a resistor is connected in parallel to the battery to detect and diagnose a voltage, current, and temperature of the battery has been proposed (Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 2002-249364). The battery condition monitoring system in Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 2002-249364 is a system for detecting a resistor connected in parallel to the battery. This system may detect whether a short circuit occurs in the battery or the resistor is short-circuited. However, the system in Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 2002-249364 cannot detect when the internal resistance of the battery is high, for example, when the battery has deteriorated. The reason why the system in Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 2002-249364 cannot detect when the internal resistance of the battery is high is as follows. That is, when the battery has deteriorated, the internal resistance of the battery increases. Therefore, in the system in Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 2002-249364, the internal resistance of the battery increases when the battery is deteriorated. The internal resistance increases by the resistance of the resistor connected in parallel to the battery and the resistance of a battery terminal. Therefore, the system in Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 2002-249364 cannot detect when the internal resistance of the battery is high if the voltage drop of the resistor due to the resistor is small in comparison to the voltage drop of the battery due to the internal resistance. As a result, the system in Japanese Unexamined Patent Publication No. 2002-249364 cannot detect when the battery is deteriorated, which leads to a problem in which it is difficult to set the
