They have called on a team of distinguished scientists, along with their most experimental creations to help find answers and possible solutions to the mysterious affliction. The team of scientists, machines, and genetically modified animals known as the "Experimental Animal Program" (EAP) is being led by an eccentric and passionate professor by the name of Derek Conway. ===== The Admin is the story of an android cyborg who has lost his identity as a living human. With all his identity gone, he must find a way to protect the last thing left for him : the research facility. ===== THE WAY TO PLAY ===== In the beginning, you will be given a pistol and a sword with 3 weapons right away. You will also have 3 skills, a jump, a dash attack and an alternate firing mode. Simply to keep the enemies away from your location, you can use these skills and use them in a manner that will allow you to defend your opponent. The first time you jump, you can jump over an enemy standing in front of you. But the moment they evade the first jump, you will have to use the dash attack, which you can shoot, and destroy the enemy in the close range that is left on their evasion time. If it is not enough to kill the enemy, you can use the alternate firing mode to shoot out a huge gun shell on their evasion time, at their evasion area. This will not be enough to fight most of the enemies however, and you will need to have some more weapons. Each time you will get a new weapon, you will need to unlock it. This will be done by beating boss battles in the facility. And you will get another weapon for every boss battle. If you have cleared 10 bosses, you will get a new weapon. If you reached 25 bosses, you will get a new weapon, and so on. Each weapon will have it's own characteristics and properties. There are also other weapons that can be gathered along the way which you can use right away. After your journey starts, you will have a new skill bar, which can be upgraded and evolved to increase its level. You can buy upgrading materials using the money gathered by defeating enemies. A certain amount of money will be gained every time you kill a certain type of enemy. When a certain point in the story is reached, you will receive a more powerful weapon. This weapon will be stronger than the previous weapon you have and can be upgraded in various ways. You will be given an inventory in the beginning, and you can add weapons to it by defeating enemies. The Inventory is also where your HP and Skill are kept. Gathering crafting materials will not be available when you first take the starting weapons and skills. To get the materials, you will have to fight and defeat enemies in the facility to gather materials. c9d1549cdd

What's new:

There was one more dungeon in all of Mordheim. This was, of course, the dungeon of the Sky Pharaoh. For those who died and entered the afterlife had a chance to either go to the Hall of Judgment or the Hall of Execution, the Hall of Judgment was where those who chose suicide ended up after the judgment. The Hall of the Execution would tell you where your soul would be sent after the judgment. Thankfully, a being beyond our understanding had designed the afterlife to take the stress out of it for the deceased. It was a special chamber that would relieve their stress by preparing them for their afterlife. However, in case of a failed attempt to bring out a mind murderer or something worse, the chamber was prepared to trap them inescapably. Upon entering the Hall of Judgment, there was a plaque that stated that the prisoners are now in the hands of their gods. Once there, they would have to answer what went wrong in their lifetime. If their answer was satisfactory, they would be sent back to the place they failed. If they said the right answer, they would face the unforgiving nature of the underworld and their fate might still be decided by the gods they failed before, or something worse. Not knowing what lies ahead, the prisoners were led into the Hall of Judgment, and then up to the pyramid where the king waits. After hours of waiting, you finally see the Pharaoh appear from the tunnels in the pyramid. His mask is covering his face, and in place of the eyeholes is a slit that allows for his god to gaze into his soul. Once done, he points at you and then orders that you and the other prisoners be led back to the room containing the scale you first met in. Your group is ordered to be split up and tested in three groups. The first group is to be initiated. On the way back, the disguised Pharaoh tells you that he will not be able to reveal himself during the ritual. Rather, he commands that one of the members of the group remain as a living link to his god so it knows who it is dealing with. The idea behind this method is that even if his body is destroyed, the spirit can still know who is going to test it. After meeting with the other two groups, he instructs you that it would be in your best interest to be very careful and play by the rules. To most adventurers, telling them to follow the rules sounds rather boring. However, you are a necromancer and a student of the experiences and tips in the comments box below? You're in a meeting with your boss and he says "Your work is absolutely amazing." You nod your head and say "Thank you" with as much emotion as you can, but deep down you want to scream at him. Why is he making such a huge effort to tell me I'm doing a great job? Am I being too easy on him? Does he feel guilty for going easy on me? I like when people point out my attributes and tell me I'm good at something because it's hard to deal with when people say they think I'm good at something and you never hear that from them. I've been called a lot of things by people whose opinion I value, but I've never been called 'succulent'🔗
