Stop spamming HN with this nonsense. Don't you understand that "defied" means "breaking the rules"? It's just a nonsense word. ~~~ gblancman Wunderlist has the "defied" as one of the words used to describe their app It all started in July 1969. President Nixon, who was not at all happy with the way the Vietnam War was going, started dropping some bombs on Laos, possibly to get the other Southeast Asian countries to give us some help. The first of the bombs was a small one, but a classic one nonetheless: the Elephant Atomic Bomb, as people called it. The idea was to make Laos not want to join the Communists any longer, since there wouldn't be any more bombs coming from the US. But there were bugs in the design, and instead of taking the whole country down, it landed just on one building, without having an impact. It was a pretty big first mistake. The following month, August, the US sent 450,000 troops to Vietnam. During that summer of 1969, the war in Vietnam was dragged out for a few more months. We would hear bits of news, some information about troop movements and a new commander-in-chief every couple of weeks. The American press was up in arms, the American people's patience was running thin, and no one saw much of a future for any of that. August saw the first protest in DC, where the National War Mobilization headquarters was surrounded by protesters, and the famous melee that later became known as the "Battle of Michigan Avenue" took place on August 4. By the time the fall came around, the situation had gotten even worse. Despite

. devguide for.others to pdf manuale architetto neufert..1. Field of the Invention This invention relates generally to liquid dispensing devices and methods and, more particularly, to a device and method for dispensing small drops or puddles of a liquid. 2.

Description of the Related Art The related art of interest describes various systems, but none discloses the present invention. There is a need for a device and method that allows a liquid to be selectively deposited in puddles or individual droplets on a surface in a controlled fashion for a variety of applications. There is also a need for an accurate, consistent, easy-to-use device that is economical and produces only small amounts of waste material. The present invention provides a solution to these needs. The present invention provides a device and method for dispensing a predetermined amount of liquid from a container to a surface, such as a table top, a desk or a floor. The device comprises a reservoir, a reservoir valve for controlling the flow of liquid from the reservoir to the surface, and a housing for the reservoir and for mounting the reservoir on a surface for filling the reservoir. The reservoir valve is preferably controlled manually. According to the present invention, the device further comprises a tube, having a first and second end, that extends from the reservoir to the surface. The tube is preferably flexible for being able to curve or bend. A means for heating the tube is preferably present to soften the tube at the first end to aid in the flow of liquid through the tube. Preferably, the means for heating the tube comprises an electrical wire. The wire can be connected directly to the reservoir valve or to a wire lead for the reservoir valve.

According to the present invention, the reservoir includes a tube connector for connecting to the reservoir valve. The tube connector is preferably located at the reservoir's second end. The reservoir preferably has a chamber to facilitate the manipulation of the reservoir valve. The tube connector and the reservoir chamber are preferably formed integrally, using a molding process to fabricate the device. The method of the present invention comprises filling the reservoir to a predetermined level, thus creating a depression in the reservoir. Next, a predetermined amount of liquid is dispensed to the surface from the reservoir using the tube. Preferably, the tube is heated before or during dispensing of the liquid. The dispensing of the liquid preferably includes unidirectional flow of the liquid. The above-
