www.kavapa.com (North America, Region 2) When my computer boots up, it should go into this mode: "This message will display on every startup. I then would have to turn on the pc, and hit OK. I'd like to just be able to do this automatically while I'm using my computer. In other words, I don't want to have to turn on my pc every time I start my computer. A: There's no programming needed here, it's just manual steps. You need to hit the "Startup Settings" from the keyboard / the Win key and then edit the startup programs. I believe you'll find it under "My Computer" > "Properties" > "Advanced System Settings" > "Settings" > "Startup and Recovery" and you'll need to make a shortcut for the following things: Chrome WinSCP The "Notepad" program (in Win 7, you can use "Edit" instead) You can install WinSCP in the following way, use Google to find an answer: Next, make a new shortcut. Go to "My Computer" > "Properties" > "Shortcuts" > "Create Shortcut..." (or "File", "New", "Shortcut...", "Create Shortcut to Folder..." for older Windows versions). Make sure "Create a shortcut" is checked, otherwise you'll have to change this to "Create Shortcut to File..." Double click on the shortcut you've just made and change the target folder to where you'd like the shortcut to be, for example: "C:\Users\UserName\AppData\Local\Google\Chrome\Application" (for Chrome, you'll most likely have a different name). Next, select the "Command Line" radio button, and type "win scp" (without quotes) and press "Enter". Next, go back to "Shortcut" > "Advanced" > "Startup Parameters", and add "-option" to the list of parameters. In this example, I would add "infinite_edit" to the list of parameters. Now, whenever you start Chrome, you will be prompted to save files to a "WinSCP. *Note that there is also a WinSCP GUI available that can be used
