O'Neal sat out Sunday's Wizards-Hawks game due to a left knee contusion suffered in the previous game. O'Neal finished the 2011-12 season with a 15.8 ppg, 7.5 rpg, 1.8 apg and 1.2 spg stat line. However, he played just 12 games for the Wizards in the first half of the season before a series of knee injuries. O'Neal was scratched from four of the final six Wizards games in April as the team looked for a change of scenery. The Wizards waived O'Neal on Monday and added him to the team's PSA list on Tuesday, and he should be ready to return to the court when he recovers from the surgery. All signs point to O'Neal not returning as a starter, but he could still see time in the second unit with the hope that his experience and work ethic will benefit his younger teammates. UPDATE: Adam Caplan of ESPN.com tweeted that O'Neal will receive a 15-day contract, and he will have two-days of team contact before the four-day rehabilitation period begins. Wow, IMHO, he's gonna be atrocious. Gonna look just like a man who wears a ball cap backwards. He just could never get healthy and nobody on the Wizards wanted to wait with him so we have to see what he gets back in. The NBA doesn't really care too much about guys like him getting minutes in the league but it's probably the last chance for him. He was a pretty good player before the last knee issue, but I don't get why you guys have such a hard on for him. He doesn't play defense ( I have seen a few of his games and he can't really move laterally), but the guy is a hustler and has a great
