In his own time, visionary Howard Wainer knew he would someday become a mentor, and that transition from lover of music to great musical leader began the moment he became artistic director of The Cleveland Orchestra in 1973. It was a high point in his career, and it started a career of mentorship that has touched the lives of many young musicians in his beloved Cleveland area. Wainer, as artistic director, continued to prepare the orchestra in the years following his hiring and coached many young musicians in their appearance and behavior. He befriended and mentored many people during the 24 years he was on the job. That's the kind of musical director he was. He 6d1f23a050
