glide test a week from now.” The reusable winged ship, designed to carry six passengers, is set to make its first flight – unassisted by fuel or rockets – later this month. Last year’s rocket-powered test flight ended when the craft’s twin engines failed to ignite. “We are an eight-year-old company and we want to make sure we get this right,” Searfoss said. “We want to learn how to do it again as we do many things – almost none of them right the first time.” While the original SpaceShipOne built by a team at Mojave Air and Space Port was only capable of making 30-minute runs, the new version boasts a flight time of one hour or more. The ship, which can carry up to six passengers, has “four times the capacity of the original,” Searfoss said. The WhiteKnightTwo carrier 6d1f23a050
