

Ninjin: Clash of Carrots is an anime-inspired beat-em-up with a gaggle of varied enemies, deep customization and ninjas! Play through side-scrolling worlds consisting of multiple stages and collect carrots stolen by the evil Shogun Moe! Carrots act as currency which can be redeemed in the Corgi Store for new equipment, or the Shady Shop for special weapons, masks and other customization items. I know how it works Nintendo. They were "more" than other companies in the past, but they're completely different now and they're a Mega corporation so they need to adapt to the changing times. I know it makes money, but it's not something I'd want Nintendo to want to do. I want Nintendo to only do what they want to do; that's a good thing. So I want that more than I want to pay for a console that can play NES games. I don't mind paying if Nintendo wants to give back some of the extra money they've earned. Like I said, I'm not the only one that thinks this. Just because other people are OK with a digital library, that doesn't mean I like or approve of it. I don't think the world deserves any more Nintendo, and I'm pretty sure they don't deserve any more money either, now, or even later on. Hey, it's the 80s! Nintendo is the 80s and so is Sega and so is everything else. First off, I'm not gonna argue about the price of consoles, that's your business. That said, I get the point people are making. With that said, your argument based on "us can't have both" assumes that we'll ALWAYS want both. We're not - and Nintendo would have to redefine what they want. I'm ok with that - I don't see how it hurts the consumers. If I don't want/need to play a certain older game on Wii U, then I'm not going to, period. But if I want, then why? Why can't we all just live with that? Do you like Coke or Pepsi better, so you only drink Coke, or do you like both equally, so you drink them both? And just like with Nintendo, there might be a day when the younger generation choose to enjoy Nintendo - the older generation won't see it in the same light. So you might stop buying them because your father wants to do it, but you still enjoy both. 5ec8ef588b
